

STATINTL

WASHINGTON Scrapbook

By Walter Trohan
Chicago Tribune Press Service

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—Allen W. Dulles, former chief of the central intelligence agency, reports the Moscow Zoo has an exhibit calculated to dramatize its policy of peaceful coexistence—a lion and a lamb living peacefully together in the same cage.

An American visitor, who was amazed by the sight, sought out the keeper to say that the feat was extraordinary. He expressed surprise that it hadn't received more publicity in the western world as a major Russian accomplishment.

"It will," the keeper explained, "just as soon as we can work it out so that the lamb won't have to be replaced every day."